Advance Directives and Physician Orders for Life Sustaining Treatment (POLST)

An advance directive gives written instructions about your future medical care in case something happens to you and you are unable to tell someone your medical wishes. For the state of Washington, this written instruction takes the form of two (2) documents:

1. A Health Care Directive (known as a Living Will); and
2. A Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care.

If you are seriously ill or in very poor health, your health care provider can use the Portable Orders for Life-Sustaining Treatment (POLST) to represent your wishes for future care as clear and specific medical orders, indicating what types of life-sustaining treatment you want or do not want in the case of a medical emergency.

You have certain rights with an Advance Directive and a POLST:

- The right to make your own decisions about your medical care.
- The right to accept or refuse surgical or medical treatment.
- The right to have an Advance Directive or POLST.
- The right to cancel an Advance Directive or POLST at any time.

Advance Directives/POLST Policy and Procedure

Anyone who requests Community Health Plan of Washington's (CHPW's) Advance Directives/POLST policy and procedure will be provided a copy by calling the CHPW Customer Service department. This policy and procedure are available online at <https://medicare.chpw.org/member-center/member-rights/advance-directive/>.

If You Have Complaints About Advance Directives/POLST

If you think CHPW or its providers, contractors, vendors, or business associates are not complying with the state of Washington's Advance Directives/POLST guidance, you may file a grievance. For information about filing a grievance or complaint, refer to the Grievance and Appeal Process.

Additional Information

More information, resources, and forms about your Advance Directive rights are on the Washington State Medical Association Advance Directives Q&A webpage located at: https://wsma.org/WSMA/Resources/Advance_Care_Planning/POLST/WSMA/Resources/Advance_Care_Planning/POLST/POLST.aspx.

Member Rights and Responsibilities

Member Rights

Your right to get information about the plan, services, practitioners and providers and member rights and responsibilities.

- You have a right to ask for information in writing about your rights and responsibilities.
- You have a right to have information about your health care plan and its services explained to you in a way you will understand, and in a different language if necessary.

- You have a right to no-cost interpreters during scheduled health care visits and to have interpreters when you interact with CHPW. This includes members who are deaf, deaf/blind, or hard of hearing.
- You have a right to know the name, title, and qualifications of the practitioners, providers, and staff who care for you.
- You have a right to get information in writing about what you must do to see a provider other than your primary care provider (PCP).
- You have a right to ask for information in writing about what you must do when you need CHPW's approval for health care services.
- You have a right to get information in writing about CHPW's organizational structure and operations.
- You have a right to get information in writing about how we pay doctors and hospitals. You may also receive an explanation of how referrals to specialists affect our payment to providers.
- You have a right to get information in writing about if we pay providers extra for certain care (physician incentive programs).
- You have a right to ask for information in writing about which medical service you used and showing how CHPW paid for a service. This is known as an Explanation of Benefits (EOB).
- You have a right to request copies of your medical record and ask for changes when necessary.
- You have a right to know that the government has set standards for safe and effective pharmacy services.
- You have a right to know what drugs are covered by CHPW. For more information, ask for a copy of the Community Health Plan of Washington Drug Formulary by calling CHPW's Customer Service Department.
- You have a right to get information in writing about How we report how well we do with your care. We measure our performance using the Healthcare Effectiveness Data Information Set, or HEDIS. You may ask to see the HEDIS data and have someone explain what the information means. For more information, contact the Customer Service department.
- You have a right to be treated with dignity and respect and right to privacy.
- You have a right to be given care and service that go along with your values and beliefs.
- You have a right to get services without being discriminated against.
- You have a right to expect CHPW and your providers to protect your privacy. (Refer to your Notice of Privacy Practices located at <https://medicare.chpw.org/member-center/member-rights/>).
- You have a right to have your wishes for your future medical care made known to others if you are too sick to let them know. This includes the right to choose a person to make medical decisions for you if you are unable to do so. You can do this with a living will, a durable power of attorney for health care, or both.
- You have a right to refuse treatment and be told what might happen with your health.
- You have a right to refuse to take part in experimental research.

- You have a right to get information about other health care options available from CHPW.
- You have a right to get information about what you must do when you need an authorization for health care services.
- You have a right to candidly discuss with your provider the right for medically necessary treatment options for your health condition, including the risks involved, regardless of cost or coverage.
- You have a right to get a second opinion from another CHPW provider.
- Your right to voice complaints or file an Appeal about the organization or the care it provides.
 - You have a right to tell us your complaints or to appeal decisions about your health care or about CHPW without fear that you may not be able to receive care in the future.
 - You have a right to be told about our grievance process when telling us about your complaints. You also have the right to get an answer to your complaint in a timely manner.
 - You have a right to get a copy of our grievance policy. This will tell you how to file an appeal if you disagree with one of our decisions or if you are dissatisfied with your health care. See the Grievances and Appeal Process for your program.
 - You have a right to get a review of an appeal decision.
- Your right to make recommendations regarding the CHPW's Member Rights and Responsibilities policy.
 - You have a right to recommend changes to CHPW policies and procedures, including the policy about your rights and responsibilities and our policy on advance directives. For information about how to recommend changes, please call CHPW's Customer Service Department.
- Your right to safe and timely health care.
 - You have a right to get care and service in a safe, comfortable, and clean environment.
 - You have a right to get proper and timely health care, including emergency services, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
- Your right to choose your providers and your health plan.
 - You have a right to get care from a CHPW provider.
 - You have a right to choose your primary care clinic, ask for a PCP, or change providers as often as once a month, at any time during the month. (The change is effective the first day of the following month after you call to change your PCP)
 - You have a right to self-refer yourself to a CHPW women's health care provider.
 - You have a right to choose a behavioral Health Care provider.
